

systems. These results help to better explain the healthcare needs of Arizona's aging population. While the overall numbers of older adults being discharged from Arizona's hospitals tended to be the greatest among the youngest old, Arizona's oldest old are those who most often experience health issues requiring hospitalization. With the projected increase in Arizona's elderly population, the burdens faced by Arizona's residents and their healthcare providers will pose a greater burden on Arizona's residents and healthcare system.